- On weekends she wakes up before noon to start her day with a morning exercise and afterwards likes to cook a nice meal and spend time with her friends.
- Her weekends are very relaxed, but she makes sure she isn't too relaxed due to all the assignments she still has to finish and are on her mind.
- Affected by the COVID-19 pandemic, her routines and habits will change from going outside to working inside.
- She is aware that she may lose motivation here and there by not being consistent with her habits, so she may think of alternatives during her transition to class and work being remote.

Habits:

She has an 8am to 12pm job from Tuesday to Thursday, every morning to noon. She likes to start her morning with a full cup of water and fruits. Two days a week she wakes up early to go jogging. She used to take public transportation habitually, but now she just tries to wake up before 10am since classes are online. Most of the time she makes her own lunch before another session of class or work. Sometimes after class or work, she likes to visit the park by her house to get some fresh air to relax and take a breather from all the time she's been inside. She manages to finish her assignments, study for her exams, and to sleep at around 10:30 or 11pm every night. As soon as she gets into bed, she likes to destress and play her favorite games on her phone and calls it a night.

Goals:

- To graduate and receive her B.S. in Political Science.
- Apply for full-time jobs and paid internships after her time at school, preferably remote.
- Have a healthy lifestyle while quarantining inside, but also to relax from time to time.
- Move to San Diego, CA sometime after she graduates.

Frustrations/Pain points:

- Having inconsistent information or too much information that is difficult to navigate.
- Spending too much time trying to find information or features that could be found in one place.
- Hard to understand information.
- Afraid there is not a lot of resources to receive during these trying-times.
- Not being able to take a breather and catch up with friends physically.
